

The mind of the heart is for all that comes from nothing.
What if it extinguishes for lover's sake, nor can I survive.
Through and through once or twice, to the land of fantasy I journey.
Gerrie, imposing of their kind, go the Seven Seas of Never.
Long and gone, as if there were neither.
No truth, no falsity.
I flourish, I grow; I deteriorate, I fall.
After all, can it be?
Left in a state of vexation.
Left in a vacuum of life.

26.11.78.

I cannot see life as graceful as it can be.
It is but an awkward, confused stage of being;
a mess of the vogue.
A fraud to all is the message of life given:- meaning, mystery or dilemma?
Gone! Gone! Let it be animal, not man.
Weep no more; but love no more,
for Lucifer has its place.

26.11.78.

電影

烈女青春

與電影中的人物

- 非慣性化了現實，使觀眾的距離時遠時近，透過這過頭恩來帶出香港及文化現實
- 人與人關係的虛偽及割離
- 現代資本主義社會的步調 → 效率，成功，→ 社會經驗及個人經驗，沒有機會再去反省及重整自己的經驗，沒有時間及精力去賦予意義給一些經歷
- 香港政府是一個行政機器，功能是為了政治經濟利益架構 / 分配各人的資源 / 沒有一套道德觀
- 教育界人化利用社會權威地位，透過輿論界及行政機器去控制資料 / 影片的傳遞，有一套道德的包裝，「家長式」的方法來教導學生及「deviants」，一套模式來實行，conformity，循規蹈矩

She was like me in lineaments - her eyes
Her hair, her features, all, to the very tone
Even of her voice, they said were like to mine;
But soften'd all, and temper'd into beauty;
She had the same lone thoughts and wanderings,
The quest of hidden knowledge, and a mind
To comprehend the universe: nor these Alone, but with them gentler powers than mine,
Pity, and smiles, and tears - which I had not;
And tenderness - but that I had for her;

Lord Byron, Manfred,
act 2, scene 2, lines 105-14.

Hear me, hear me -
Astarte! my beloved! speak to me:
I have so much endured, so much endure -
Look on me! the grave hath not changed thee more Than I am changed for thee. Thou lovedst me Too much, as I loved thee: we were not made To torture thus each other, though it were
The deadliest sin to love as we have loved.

Lord Byron, Manfred
act 2, scene 4, lines 117-23

Essays, Poems and autobiography

Hung Yat Sang

Dedicated to

Truth, who sleeps quietly in the golden water;

Love, who reigns softly in the human heart.

An essay on the present condition in the Baptist College, H.K.

The administrative policies of the Baptist College are in a mess. There are conflicts between the school authority and the Student Union. Besides this, the academic societies are impotent and useless in their activities and functions.

The lack of academic activities and the decline of the free spirit of inquiry into various disciplines may be due to several factors. In the first fork, the institution is too 'Christian' in character. Religious propaganda are prevailing in all aspects of school life. The students are compelled to attend Assembly and Religion classes. Secondly, the office-holders of some of the academic societies are obsessed by immediate-rewarding activities and functions. They set their objectives as low as possible so that they can achieve the ends as easy as possible. There is a concentration of power in the hands of a few officials. Any proposed activities which are contrary to their ideas will probably be turned down.

16th April, 1978

Unpredictability is power.

You can control your environment by making yourself appear unpredictable.
Conversely you may control yourself by making the environment an unpredictable one.

better to have loved & lost

Than never to have loved at all - Terrence

better to be foul than to have been fair - Donne

Give me chastity & continence, only not yet - Augustine, ^{VIII}Confessions

- | | | |
|---|---------------------|---|
| 1 The Stellar Laudation | 22nd April, 1976 | P |
| 2 The Forlorn Beach | 12th April, 1976 | P |
| 3 Epique of the Seafarers - The Seafarers Dream | 24th May, 1976 | P |
| 4 Affection | 10th April, 1976 | P |
| 5 The analysis of personality | 14th April, 1976 | E |
| 6 Letter to the Editor (SCMP) on Green Paper | 12th December, 1977 | E |
| 7 A dingie for a forsaken soul | 29th December, 1977 | P |
| 8 I like | 3rd January, 1978 | P |
| 9 Message to a Star - My autobiography (12-13) P.1 | 4th January, 1978 | A |
| 10 An essay on the present condition in the Baptist College | 16th April, 1978 | E |

The Stellar Laudation

The leaves rustle on the sycamore trees,
swaying gracefully in the evening breeze.
The Sun sinks gloriously in effulgent hues,
touching the ocean with her last kiss.
Under the exquisite earthshine I will feast,
a sublime feeling overwhelms my cup of life.
The sky is resplendent with stars in peace,
after the lonesome foggy nights cease.

Oh! Myriads of star-dusts in the Milky Way, shine with heavenly grace.
How I rejoice with you!
With your charming smile and your superb style!
So pure and chaste!
A pleasure to my mind.
Living under the starry nights,
with a feeling sublimes,
A bliss I find!
In the desert you will be my guide,
in chaos you will be my heart,
in peace you will be my life!

Oh! Stars, stars of love and hope, sparkle pellucidly in my soul,

where I quest and endeavour,
under the celestial fire,
illuminating my murky road.
Within your wondrous whole,

I live and grow;

striving for my ideals.

Yet my life is lackadaisical;

In my lonesome journey towards my goals,

plaintive for communion and warmth,

to enhance my zest for life,

and to keep up my quest for Truth!

There lies the beauteous reflection of the Milky Way,
the image of which sparkles dreamily,
on the undulating water.

How I long to touch you!

Whenever I find myself in despair;

You furnish me with hope and peace

with your starry eyes;

fill my bounded mind.

22nd April, 1976

Written under the inspiration of the Universe and a girl named Aster

His whose birthday is on the 24th April (b. 24th April, 1958)
Published in the school Magazine of St. Joseph's College (1976-77)
on P.145

oals,

!

milky Way,

y,

d April, 1976

a girl named Aster

The Forlorn Beach

I take a stroll by the forlorn beach;
enjoying the cool evening breeze.
A lonesome seagull catches my eyes;
screaking desperately in his cry.

I sit on the undulating sand;
witnessing the exquisite sunset.
With folded arms and thinking deep;
pining for the one I need.

12th April, 1976

Epique of the seafarer (The seafarer's Dream)

Flow, flow, flow,
away from the Hell of Dole;
to the realm of rose.
Though his zeal has been cold;
and his paddles are old,
he fights as long as he can hold.

show, show, show,
show his whole;
though hope is low.
The seafarer is bold,
to have his heart told,
and his secrets unfold.

Row, row, row.
row the fancy boat,
to the land of gold!
And pursue the star of Pole,
with all his soul,
as far as man knows!

24th May, 1976

Affection

In my little selfish world;
with a noble feeling that sublimates,
pure, sincere and always true;
through which ever melts my heart.
For Truth and happiness it pursues;
blazing fiery in my soul.
Of faith and hope and my beauteous star;
devoted to your ultimate good.

10th April, 1976

The analysis of personality

It will be vague and fruitless to have a discussion on the topic 'personality' without clinging to any appropriate definition of it. First of all, I shall attempt to define the concept of personality relative to my point of view. When we speak of the personality of an individual, we refer to the basic and intrinsic qualities of his mental and psychological constitutions that make him unique in this world, so that by these characteristics, one can distinguish one particular individual from others. In the widest sense, the personality of an individual involves all the emotions, temperaments, characters and thinking methods characteristic of that particular person concerned. It must be noted that the personality of an individual is not a collective sum of static mental constitutions. It is constantly changing, veering and transforming, being shaped by environmental influences either consciously or unconsciously. Yet, this change of personality, in general, is subtle and gradual. As a result, it is usually imperceptible among the individual concerned.

Although the secondary elements in personality is changing, the primary substance of it does not alter appreciably. Unlike personality, the character of an individual only refers to the moral constitution of a person and does not involve temperaments and emotions in general.

Under a careful scrutiny, we can resolve all the nonmaterial processes of life - emotions, feelings, thinking methods, precepts, temperaments and ideas into a set of a priori principles of life adopted by the particular individual concerned. In other words, a person applies these a priori principles to any situations and problems encountered in his course of life. We may say that the personality of an individual depends on his a priori principles of life and these principles, in turn, are functions of two main varying factors - environmental and hereditary conditions. It is important to see that these a priori principles of life play a vital role in our attitudes, our conduct, our thinking methods and our modes of life. In fact, they determine our outlook on life and our happiness. ~~Consequently,~~ they determine our future life for we tend to build up our personalities through implications and evolution of these deep-rooted principles.

April, 1976

Human beings have a habitual reluctance to change, to reform. We tend to conform with our present social conventions and customs. We always like to follow others' path; we are rather pneumatic. This proclivity of man, in fact, arises from the fear of responsibility and the fear of choice. We speak, act and think according to what are considered to be right for many average people do the same and walk the same road with us. Then, we will not be alone (social-outcasts). Hence we will feel more secure. If we do something wrong we have the average people to fall back on for they do the same thing; they commit the same mistake and we are not exposed to blame or to be punished. Rules and regulations are imposed on then us to keep law and order in our society, though some of them are is ridiculous and create injustice. Besides, social conventions are adopted on through religions, cultures and philosophy. The children are brought up there under the guidance of their parents and the teachings of the traditional social conventions adopted. These dogmatic doctrines are to see instilled and forced into the young minds when they grow up. They is in our will, in turn, instill their doctrines (of course, on an irrational basis) life. In into the future generation. We always conceive ourselves to be civilized people without knowing that we are, in fact, uncivilized and raw. We do not bother to give up the war-like and brutal up our nature inherited by our ancestral humanoids. We like excitement and deep-rooted violence. From the above observation, I would say, the evolution of human beings cannot be in cope with the advancement to reforms. We in science and technology.

It is interesting to see that we are always frightened of dissimilarity and non-conformity, for insecure feeling arises. Every of responsibility man has different faces before different groups of people; he tends to according to what adjust his behaviour with people he meets (I call it adaptation).
do the same and Yet, the more he wants to adjust his behaviour, the more he be alone (social- feels uneasy and uncomfortable. He, gradually will lose all his do something wrong confidence and remains tacit throughout. In contrast with this for they do the fear of failure and responsibility, man is characterized by the love we are not exposed of power. In his limited mind, man always desires to be are imposed on the Infinite and to be immortal. Power can partly satisfy his vanity. This love of power, together with vanity, will make people compete and strive for fame. If the negative approach is taken, this will result in either crimes or dictatorship. The fear of responsibility and the love of power are, in fact, two ambivalent motives in our nature. The introduction of a supreme being and dogmas of religions also have a profound impact on people. They influence our everyday life and shape our characters as well as our insight into life. Of course, they also shape our social conventions and customs adopted. Besides, the prevalent philosophical and political concepts and ideas also play a significant role in the evolution of society. As individuals and society are constantly interacting with each other, these prevalent ideas exert a profound influence on individuals, thus shaping the social conventions and these conventions, in turn, also shape the life of individuals.

The modes of education and early experience also have a vehement impact on the personality of an individual. In general, early education tends to condition individuals with the prevalent social conventions and behaviours and most important of all, our attitudes towards life and our world. Parents always tell their children, 'You must be diligent so that you will be well-to-do in your later life; you will live comfortably and happily,' or again, 'You must study because it is for your own future.' I will say that if parents teach their children in this way, they are only bringing up a group of selfish, egotistic and pragmatic individuals who may be detrimental to our society. Moreover, I would say that their concepts on life, learning and the world are dogmatic and negative. Well, it is right to say that, 'You must be diligent and study hard. But it will be wrong to say, 'for your future well-being and comforts or for your ends. for this statement has many undesirable implications. In the child's mind, the first concept instilled is, 'Everything I do must have a reward; if not, I will not do it.' The second concept is, 'well-being, richness and comforts are the only purposeful goals in life and I shall try everything to attain it.' and the third concept is 'knowledge is only and the only means of acquiring richness and well-being.' The consequence of these ideas are significant. The principles of life are then built upon these assumptions, 'Richness, comforts and well-being are the ultimate goals of mankind. In order to attain these goals, money is needed. We study for we can get a degree and earn a lot of money so as to acquire these goals' and 'Take and never give; be pragmatic, narcissistic and selfish.' The bad effects of these principles, I think, are well exposed and need no explanation.

'Is it possible to change the personality of an individual?' Well, to change the personality of an individual really means to

Letter to the Editor (SCMP) Unpublished.

17, HOI HONG ST.,
8th FLOOR,
NORTH POINT,
HONG KONG.
12th DEC., 1977

THE EDITOR.
SOUTH CHINA MORNING POST, LTD.
G.P.O. BOX NO. 47
HONG KONG.

Dear Editor,

The recent miraculous issue of the Green Paper of Education by the Hong Kong Government has thrust the development of education, especially higher education, to a sophisticated and bizarre era. It will impart so much impetus to the industrial and economic development of the colony that it will serve as the preliminary phase to the blossoming of the Brave New Hong Kong. In the name of industry, market-value and pragmatism, the Green Paper endeavours to seek for the injustice of education in Hong Kong with the creation of an elite class, under which regiments of human robots toil and pass away. Although there is a constant dissent of opinions and views, the government always act or adopt to change his principles of life and hence all the deep-seated & prior assumptions of life. It is really a difficult job for one, who has to leave his little secure haven and accept insecure (with reference to him) set of principles of life. He may feel, for a time, have no reliance upon which he can trust. He may feel lost accordingly. Another drawback is our reluctance to change. Human beings are obstinate; they are conservatives, for it is difficult to leave something that has been relied upon. In order to overcome these problems, education and love must be furnished with so as to make him feel secure and right (education helps us to think rationally so that we can analyse the situations and solve our problems suitably. Love can provide us with faith, security and confidence so that we will not feel lost and insecure).

Our future life, our happiness and our outlook are, I would say, dependent on our principles of life. Hence, it is vital for us to see that these principles of life are directed to higher ideals of life. Through our active process of learning, sublimation & thinking, I believe that we can achieve happiness and prosperity.

14th April, 1976-

Letter to the Editor (SCMP) Unpublished.

17, HOI HONG ST.,
8th FLOOR,
NORTH POINT,
HONG KONG.
12th DEC., 1977

THE EDITOR,
SOUTH CHINA MORNING POST, LTD.
G.P.O. BOX NO. 47
HONG KONG.

Dear Editor,

The recent miraculous issue of the Green Paper of Education by the Hong Kong Government has thrust the development of education, especially higher education, to a sophisticated and bizarre era. It will impart so much impetus to the industrial and economic development of the colony that it will serve as the preliminary phase to the blossoming of the Brave New Hong Kong. In the name of industry, market-value and pragmatism, the Green Paper endeavours to seek for the injustice of education in Hong Kong with the creation of an elite class, under which regiments of human robots toil and pass away. Although there is a constant dissent of opinions and views, the government always act or adopt policies according to its sole benefits which are surely the benefits and purposes of the Colonial Education. Really, its aim is to cultivate an illiberal flock of technicians and labourers who are conditioned and computerized, to suit the development of Hong Kong. It has always been the ideal of the Government that the heroes of our educational system are those who can only scribble piles of almost indecipherable notes and pass the incredible and flound examinations held each year to castrate the less fortunate scape-goats of their counterparts.

Indeed, the Green Paper educationists rejoice in their comfortable office, shedding their crocodile tears over the discarded and unwanted victims whose foresight and outlook are rendered improvident by under-education. On the other hand, the few chosen ones are proffered chances of higher education, enjoying their lavish privileges provided by the government-controlled institutions of higher learning. However, their senses and awareness should be inebriated by mass indoctrination in economic ends in order that they can be kept tractable, submissive and deceived. Thus, the Government can condemn its citizens to improvidence, ignorance and apathy by depriving their rights of education as well as imbuing them with morbid dogmas of gambling and other forms of misery. In fact, the Government is ingenious and kind enough to prepare

a lethal Ambrosia
mercenary tree
democracy and injustice and in
make the unequal
through the so
excess higher edu
education) can pr manifestation of a mass is regarded
other intrinsic v
a so-called no justified in
The adoption
the discrimination
great signs of
as well as to
spirit of free
realize the tru
and servitude
of the students
from secondary
higher learning,

the
its aim
the del of
are notes
each year
contingents
comfortable
and ordered the few government-cases and education in tractable,
its spring
with many. In to prepare a lethal Ambrosia for its citizens in order to nurture its mercenary tree of economic benefits with the sacrifice of democracy and human rights. Seeing that the present social injustice and inequality are great, the government resolves to make the inequality worse than ever and justifies itself through the socio-economic need of the community and that excess higher education (as well as unlimited expansion of tertiary education) can produce social discontent which is but another manifestation of social injustice. Under this educational system, the mass is regarded merely as numb economic instruments of no other intrinsic value. Each individual is viewed as a means to a so-called 'Utilitarian' purpose which is neither utilitarian nor justified in any liberal ideology.

The adoption of the Junior School Certificate Examination and the discrimination against private educational institutions are the great signs of the government's intentions to monopolize education as well as to decay and neglect intellectual education. The spirit of free inquiry is stifled lest the citizens should realize the truth and their reality. Dogmas of inequality and servitude is forced, otherwise instilled, into the minds of the students. The tsunami of over-specialization, beginning from secondary schools and culminating in the institutions of higher learning, sweeps away creativity and insights while passivity and submissiveness are taught as the highest virtues. Perhaps the Government wants every student to be an eidetic memory machine, a walking encyclopaedia of facts and a phenomenal manipulator of methods, without any regard for humanity. The individual is used as a means, rather than regarded as an end in itself. The ideal 'educated' citizen is docile, bigoted and thoughtless so that the Government can always control them. I suspect that the Green Paper educators have a disdain towards people, especially those of the lower strata in society. I assume that the

I suppose that the Green Paper Educationists are the Grand Inquisitors, whose duties are to create social injustice, enhance ignorance and mold 'regiments of unthinking labourers and technicians. In my opinion, the Green Paper Educationists (and the Government as well) deserve a Nobel prize in 'economic development' for their diabolical contributions to the educational system and the growing misery of the standard Hong Kong students and citizens.

Yours faithfully,
Y. S. Hung.

A dinge for a forsaken soul
To arch over the dewy bow of hope,
and be inebriated with the euphoria of a dinge.
To deceive eternity through the cross,
or the Communist Manifesto in a frost.
Speak not of bliss and being,
but tears and laughter in the tragedy of living.
Seek not for love and giving,
but sorrow and despair in reward of seeing.

Upon the world a soul yields last,
upon Fatasia - lost in its irrevocable past!
A forlorn heart under the Ordeal of Fate,
strangles God with courage and hate.
A lonesome Ego at the mercy of desperation,
goes Lucifer with misery and frustration.
Upon the tranquil Darkness the heart dwells,
upon the Unknown the Ego melts.

29th December, 1977

I like

I am devoured by the night,
the cold wintry evenings and the morbid yellow light.
I have been overwrought by unknown fears,
my faded glory and manish tears.

I like to roam on a forsaken beach,
in which nobody but mist can reach.

I like to feel the chilling rain,
by which mystical melancholy be refrained.

I like to gaze at the dull-orange sky,
forgetting whether I have been honest or sly.

I like to contemplate in the midst of dusk,
wondering whether an iron heart can rust.

I like to ascend my old sallow stairway,
leaving a pale shadow to the end of day.

I like to get lost on a tranquil road,
on which my soul can be peaceful and old.

I like to travel to the edge of the Fire,
from which I can start once more.

I am devoured by the night,
the cold wintry evenings and the morbid yellow light.
I have been overwrought by unknown fears,

Message to a star - My Autobiography (12-13) P.1

That is a long long time. That is a plebeian story. I started to write this piece of autobiography in 1976, during the long Summer Holidays. Then, I put off my writing for a year because of unclassified reasons. After my matriculation, I prepared to work on this message again.

This part of my story began at eight years ago - when I was twelve years old. After I took the Secondary School Entrance Examination (S.S.E.E.) in 1970, I was admitted to St. Joseph's College (7, Kennedy Road, H.K.) as my fourth choice instead of my first choice - St. Paul's co-educational college. I joined a Summer Program on the 'introduction to school life in St. Joseph's college.' This was a grand orientation program organized by the members of the Social Service Group and served to introduce some of the aspects of school life. The first thing in the school I became aware of was the large number of foreigners studying in S.J.C. Besides, the aristocratic and snobbish atmosphere in the college made me feel uncomfortable and uneasy.

My first day in secondary school is perhaps my most unforgettable day in my life. I was enrolled in F.1D and studied under our tiger form-master - Mr. Francis Bray, who was a Malaysian. Ha! There is something I can be proud of - I was the first pupil to receive his breath-taking and prodigious gift in that academic year - several slaps and blows on head and shoulder (I put down my address in a wrong form in the paper he gave us). Ah! I can still remember the 'H' affair (on how to write H - I wrote H; he wanted H) and the 'was' affair (on how to pronounce was), in which I received more than fifteen slaps, blows and punches before my classmates as well as numerous curses and insult such as the Lunatic, the ass, the idiot, the cow and all kinds of everything. Then I was called the Lunatic. Other students received nicknames such as the dog, the mouse! Then I was considered as one of the greatest laughing stock in the class. Really, I think I deserved the Oscar Academy Award for laughing stock that year. Besides, I received numerous 'extra' slaps and punches when I committed mistakes. My tiger form-master had a very strict style of his own and we had to conform to his style. Otherwise, we would be slapped. Several foreign students in F.2 and a classmate whose name is Lawrence always tried to menace and tease me. My classmate also liked to hit and kick me and call me an idiot. In extra-curricular activities, I joined the First Hong Kong Scout Group and was a member of the Buffalo Patrol. But I was not trusted by my patrol leader. He even displayed his distrust openly in the patrol meeting by saying that I was like a thief. Consequently, I was phobic of everything. In scouting, I was afraid of speaking to patrol leaders and even other members. In my study, I was afraid of asking questions, discussing problems with my classmates or teachers. I kept everything to myself. Beginning from F.I, I became increasing alienated from my family.

4th Jan., 1978

Message to a star - My Autobiography (12-13) P.1

That is a long long time. That is a plebeian story. I started to write this piece of autobiography in 1976, during the long Summer Holidays. Then, I put off my writing for a year because of unspecified reasons. After my matriculation, I prepared to work on this message again.

This part of my story began at eight years ago - when I was twelve years old. After I took the Secondary School Entrance Examination (S.S.E.E.) in 1970, I was admitted to St. Joseph's College (7, Kennedy Road, H.K.) as my fourth choice instead of my first choice - St. Paul's co-educational college. I joined a Summer Program on the 'introduction to school life in St. Joseph's college.' This was a grand orientation program organized by the members of the Social Service Group and served to introduce some of the aspects of school life. The first thing in the school I became aware of was the large number of foreigners studying in S.J.C. Besides, the aristocratic and snobbish atmosphere in the college made me feel uncomfortable and uneasy.

My first day in secondary school is perhaps my most unforgettable day in my life. I was enrolled in F.1D and studied under our tiger form-master - Mr. Francis Bray, who was a Malaysian. Ha! There is something I can be my faded glory and manlyish tears.

3rd January, 1978